Exton

Countryside for all In Rutland

Exton Park is a large traditional English country estate that has been the home of the Noel family (the Earls of Gainsborough) for almost four hundred years. References to Exton Park date back as far as 1185, describing it as 'a wooded farm, enclosed for hunting deer.'

The landscape is a rich tapestry of tree cover and farmland, a man-made but mature landscape where longer vistas are interrupted by a patchwork of tree belts and woods rather than by the topography.
